

Dear {{ contact.FIRSTNAME }},

As the headline says, the Bull is back!

For everyone that is part of our Telegram community, you knew in advance that the party had started.

And to those who were courageous and held through the last two months, despite the fear and even bought more, I want to say congratulations!

Bitcoin reaching $100K has always been in the projections, since the start of this year. Last week, the market showed it's all but ready to take off for part 2.

Are you in? I hope you are. The second important question is, are you in the right places?

Hold on tight for this ride, the expectations make for a wild ride into Christmas. You thought you saw crazy already this year? Your chance of buying Bitcoin under $40K with, great probabilities, is already gone. Forever.

Now let's walk the fancy talk through by looking at the data.

I will leave you with this quote: "In the end, it was inevitable"

Yours faithfully,

Faro

Crypto

Crypto's have seen a strong rally for the last two weeks and a pullback was expected, but the market has shown resilience, meaning a pullback could take place later, or perhaps not at all (or smaller than you think).

As the market psychology moves from extreme fear (two weeks ago) to greed (now). This phase is typically referred to as "denial", where the hurt from market participants for the price action of the last two months had to be moved out of the market. (Imagine having bought Bitcoin at $65K and sold at $28K out of fear). This would have been the worst thing to do.

Only thing worse would be to be in an Altcoin and having lost 80-85% of your equity. Even then, it doesn't matter now that the second half has started.

And a new round means new opportunities!

Bitcoin Market Dominance

Bitcoin Market Dominance - BTC.D

Due to the importance of this chart, it's shown twice. First, upside down on the left side. And the regular version on the right side.

Eye to detail is required because the smallest of difference can change the interpretation completely. This is where common sense and bit of fundamental analysis also comes in handy.

With the ever growing space, can we expect Bitcoin to hold on to it's market dominance? With Ethereum's new upgrade and series of new innovations (Defi, NFT's and NFT gaming to name a few), would it make sense for those projects to take some cherry of the pie from the leader?

I think yes, I wouldn't even rule out Ethereum over-taking Bitcoin as the leader either.

Besides this, the chart on the left side shows a break-out and a retest for Altcoins to rally against Bitcoin and might be providing the best entry for the second half as we speak.

This is also illustrated on the right chart. The small triangle can be seen as a rising wedge after a break down and a head & shoulders at the same time.

The fractal is similar to Bitcoin at $50K when it dropped from $65K. Both these charts can be interpreted as decreasing Bitcoin exposure and increasing Altcoin exposure.

Again the most important question is, which ones?

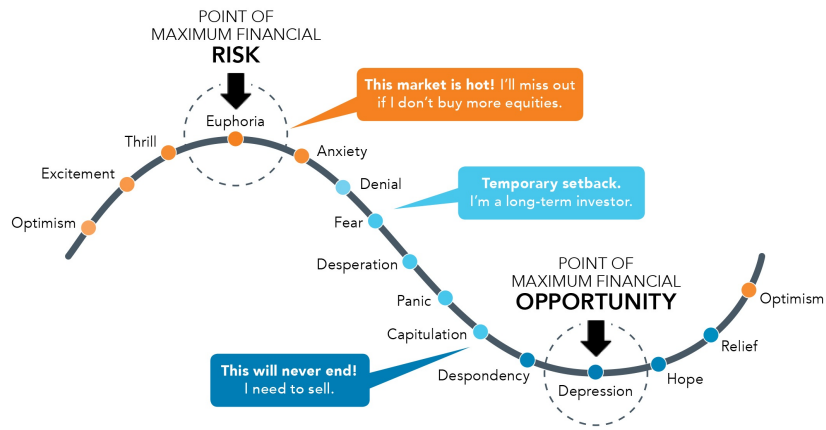

I will leave you with the following tips from the best technical analyst in the world:

- Stick with the winners (from the first part)
- Look at where money is flowing (money loves money)
- The fastest horses, are the best horses

Few of my favorites:

1. Ethereum
2. Cardano
3. Uniswap
4. Aave

Market Cycle Psychology (from last newsletter)

My old comment - unchanged

This is the point that the market is trying to come to. Have we already seen capitulation? (Talking about Bitcoin specifically). If not, how long could it take for the bottoming? To this my answer to you, not long. The opportunity presenting before your eyes will be one for the ages. Stay ready.
